

Name

Professor's Name

Course

Date

Politics a Threat to U.S. Highly Skilled Immigrants

Adams, James Truslow. The epic of America. Transaction Publishers, 2012.

The book presents an invitation for the American people to focus on the work value and disregard barriers erected by earlier generations. By barriers, Adams is referring to, among others, narrow-minded rejection of immigrants. The author was a respected author and historian. His works on American history and scholarships have been highly regarded by scholars widely. The book offers an important argument which helps in supporting the argument for the importance of immigrants in America. It provides a point from where comparisons for the benefits or rejecting and welcoming immigrant's labor input have resulted historically.

Borjas, George J. Heaven's door: Immigration policy and the American economy. Princeton University Press, 2011.

The book offers a reframed perspective of the America's immigrant policies. The author, Borjas George, is a professor of economics at Harvard Kennedy School. The book will be used to explore the views of the opponents of the open-door policy. From the exploration, the shortcomings and negative aspects will be used to offer alternative proponents' solutions.

Schleifer, Theodore. "Trump Hits Immigration during Foreign Policy Speech." CNN. 16 Sept. 2015. Web. 1 May 2016.

The article offers an insight into the speech of American Presidential Candidate, Donald Trump. In it, Trump states that he will offer a broad foreign policy. His argument is that some immigrants are treated better than Americans. The speech is reported by CNN a reputable international media house. The article will be used to examine the prevailing perspectives of immigrants by the political class.

Chavez, Leo. Shadowed lives Undocumented immigrants in American society. Cengage Learning, 2012.

The literature focuses on the undocumented immigrants in America and their contribution to the economy. Chavez Leo is a respected American anthropologist who focuses on Latin American Immigrant studies. The book's arguments and findings will be useful in presenting a case for the proper formalization of immigrants in America.

Hing, Bill Ong. Defining America: through immigration policy. Temple University Press, 2012.

The book offers a look into the interpretation of the American stand from the structures and approaches adopted about immigration. The prejudices, facts, legal and social structures in this context are also presented. The author, Hing Bill Ong, puts forward relevant data and argument from his Immigration and policy expert profession focus. I will apply the material used to show how prejudice and majority power is used to overshadow economic and sober reason in immigrants' case.

Merolla, Jennifer, S.K. Ramakrishnan, and Chris Haynes. "Illegal," "Undocumented," Or "Unauthorized": Equivalency Frames, Issues Frames, and Public Opinion on Immigration." Perspective on Politics 11.3 (2013): 789-807. ProQuest. Web. 8 May 2016.

The paper investigates the impact of the application of defining terms and policies influence from such application. Jennifer Merolla and Karthick Ramakrishnan, are political science professors and Chris Hayes is an authority on American Politics and a respected journalist, commentator and author. The book will be used to advance the argument that policies define the public opinion. It will also be used to show the educative and swaying value leaders and policy makers have over how immigrants are seen and treated.